Contemporary relevance and utilization of
Arthashastra, Yogashastra, Natyashastra,
Ayurveda, and Nitishastra in Management
Education

Organized by:
Sri Sri Center for Advance Research on Indian
Knowledge System and the IKS Division,
Ministry of Education, Govt. Of India

Objectives of the FDP

Enhance participant's comprehension of the foundational principles embedded in Indian Knowledge Systems (IKS), drawing insights from diverse fields such as Arthashastra, Nitishastra, Natyashastra, Yogasutra, and Ayurveda.

Equip participants with strategies and methodologies for seamlessly integrating IKS-based subjects into the existing management curriculum, fostering interdisciplinary connections and relevance.

Provide participants with the knowledge and tools required for effective design and development of course modules, syllabi, and teaching materials that incorporate IKS perspectives in management education.

Explore practical applications of IKS in modern management contexts, enabling participants to bridge ancient wisdom with contemporary business practices for holistic and sustainable approaches.

Facilitate networking and community-building opportunities, creating a platform for ongoing collaboration, resource-sharing, and support among participants interested in promoting IKS within the management education landscape.
